CONSTITUTION ISSUE, DECLARES DAWES HERE

La Follette May Lose Votes as a Socialist

David Lawrence

Copyright, 1924, by the Janesville Gazette.

San Francisco, Calif.—The decision of the state supreme court here which denied Senator La Follette a place in the independent column and in effect compels him to support the socialist banner will have the effect of aiding Wisconsin's leader and help the chances of President Coolidge.

Judging from the expressions of little men which have kept the La Follette managers here no other inference is possible except that their opportunities for voting have been impaired. The socialist, conforming to the requirements of the law, have kept the charter but not out of friendship for the La Follette forces and now will name La Follette the elector.

But the question may well be asked, "why did the La Follette men want to remain afoot from the socialist whose column they now embrace?"

The answer undoubtedly is that the Shanghai—Hundreds of Chinese soldiers were killed and many others wounded this morning on a six mile front from Nanjing to Muju when forces of rival military governors, fighting for possession of Shanghai, continued hostilities with impetuosity.

According to a witness who returned this afternoon after traversing the sector from Nanjing to the west of Shanghai, both sides were drenching the lines with shrapnel.

Numerous relief stations behind the six mile Nanjing front were filled with wounded today while scores of others were arriving on stretchers.

The dead have been left where they fell, according to the witness, and this practice has resulted in a carnage older extending over the whole area.

The offensive, which has resulted in continuous fighting since it opened Sunday morning, has enabled Chekiang forces to drive the Kiangnan troops back six miles, according to General Hsia Chao-chen, commander of the Chekiang forces in the center of activity.

Chicago—Test of the constitutionality of a clause in the transportation act 1920, arming the railroad labor board to require testimony, was begun today. The board petitioned the United States district court to order John McGuire of Chicago and D. B. Robertson of Cleveland to testify before the board, the latter in the time and place he concluded.

The general was greatly pleased with the audience in Janesville, which members of his party said was the largest he had during the day in his state through Minnesota and Wisconsin. Most of the crowd remained throughout his address despite a rain that gained its greatest intensity as the general commenced to speak and continued in a steady downpour throughout his stay in Janesville.

Emerging on the rear platform that stood near the bridge street crossing, almost instantaneously with the halting of the train, General Dawes was introduced to the large crowd by Stephen Boles, editor of the Gazette, as "the next vice president of the United States."

"That is the kind of speech I like to hear," said the vice presidential candidate, by way of introduction.

His voice plainly showed the strain that it has undergone in the past few days of campaigning in the west, as he launched his speech by declaring:

STILL UNCOVERED IN LYONS HILLS

Sheriff Hal Wyte Finds 50-Gallon Outfit in "Knobs" Country.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

ELKHORN—A hut ingeniously built in the side of a hill, a rockery, a country round Lyons, known as the "knobs," and cleverly concealed by brush and leaves was visited Sunday by Sheriff Hal Wyte, who seized a 50-gallon still and a quantity of alcohol. The still, officially reported complete by the joint to Major General Major M. Patrick, Washington, D. C., by telephone last night. He was informed by General Patrick that future duties and movements of the six aviators will be announced at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

At a public luncheon today, the fliers and their mechanics will make a trip describing their world famous trip.

In addition to the luncheon, the aviators will participate in the dedication of a monument at Sand Point containing the first circumnavigation of the globe by air.

The aviators are scheduled to speak briefly there.

At the home on the farm, Sheriff Wyte found another five gallon still, which he said was ingeniously concealed which he brought to the jail along with Fred and Henry Walberg, father and son, who are charged with manufacture and possession of intoxicating liquor. Henry is the son of Fred.

Sheriff Wyte seized the farm arms for some tractor parts that had been stolen from another farm and for illicit liquor.

The hut was built of brick in the side of a hill on the farm. The roof was covered with brush and leaves and brush was used to cover the door in the side that formed the entrance to the place. The still was in operation when Sheriff Wyte unexpectedly called.

The big, of unknown origin but probably due to defective wiring or lightning from a motor operating the refrigerator plant, was discovered at 10:45 p. m. by a small boy, named Eddie, who summoned neighbors.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Rockford—A stiletto was plunged into the hand of John A. Lind Rockford, Saturday night, by a lone highwayman, who attempted to hold him up, while he was enroute to a local fraternal meeting.

Lind fought against the robber and besides being wounded in the hand, was struck over the left eye, and struck on the mouth and chin.

Lind dealt the highwayman a staggering blow on the jaw, but did not knock him out. Police learned of the attempt to hold up through a physician who dressed Lind's injuries.

In addition to the fight, Mrs. La Follette said that her husband's candidature has given him many votes, but he has not been reelected.

TOURISTS PLEASED MODIFY BAN ON CALIFORNIA STOCK

Second Tourist Party from Kan., Okla. and Mo., Here — Dairy Show News.

Europeans to the National dairy show on this week in Milwaukee, 100 farmers, dairymen and representatives of Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri stopped off for a day's tour. They came to study practical dairying as it is presented by the good Wisconsin farmer. The fact that Kansas was made rich by the jump in wheat prices has failed to stem the interest of the southwest in the dairy cow as the profit producer on the farm.

This is the second touring party from these states to travel through the rock bottom of the state. Buyers and business men on the first trip when 200 came through on special trains, gave such good reports of Wisconsin's agriculture, that the dirt road farmers were attracted to Wisconsin where monthly milk checks make up more than half of the total gross income of the farms.

These tourists wanted to see practical dairy farming and were well satisfied with the program presented by Rock county.

On Special Train

They came on a special train to Rock where they were welcomed by Rock dairymen and the address of Mayor G. N. Smith, Beloit, George W. Cutts, in charge of the agricultural Bureau of the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce, manager of the tour, responded.

Five big motor buses furnished transportation.

The visitors came to see farms and to farms they were taken. First to the model dairy institution of Mr. Douglas, Beloit, whose Guernsey herd produces a wonderful milk supply and is the foundation of one of the best unchanged farms in Wisconsin. An information sheet on dairying, feeding and care of a high producing herd.

The third farm visited was that of John Wehlinger and Son, Janesville, where a purebred Holstein herd is kept under high dairy standards. The story of the progress made by Wehlinger, who came from Switzerland, is a cheering one and with a measure of success found a farm in Rock county and developed a remarkable herd, was told. John Wehlinger had no greater opportunity than any of the visiting farmers when he first started his dairy farm, building on high grades and shifting to blooded cattle for maximum results.

Guests of Bankers

From the Douglas farm the tourists went to the farm of Mr. Imman, Riverside drive, where the merit of the Brown Swiss cattle were reviewed. The hardiness of the breed impressed the visitors, who were eager to ask practical questions relating to breeding, feeding and care of a high producing herd.

The fourth farm visited was that of John Wehlinger and Son, Janesville, where a purebred Holstein herd is kept under high dairy standards. The story of the progress made by Wehlinger, who came from Switzerland, is a cheering one and with a measure of success found a farm in Rock county and developed a remarkable herd, was told. John Wehlinger had no greater opportunity than any of the visiting farmers when he first started his dairy farm, building on high grades and shifting to blooded cattle for maximum results.

Guests of Bankers

The tourists were the guests of the Rock county bankers at a luncheon given in the Janesville Y. M. C. A. at the noon hour. J. A. Craig, Janesville, and Prof. William F. of the Janesville College, Agricultural, two speakers, were in the same development of dairying in a new section and interest in market development. George H. Cutts also spoke during the noon hour.

A trip to the Rock county farm was made in the afternoon where the grain and purebred Holsteins on the farm were visited. Much praise was expressed by the visitors on the condition of the dairy barn, the cattle and the equipment of the county institution. A detailed report was made by Archibald Cutts, superintendent, on the averages and records made with this herd, nominating the honor roll of America for making better than a 500 butter-fat average per cow in a year.

Keeping of cow testing association records held special interest for the tourist farmers, who were told known production was essential to successful dairying.

From the county farm the tourists were escorted to Madison where they were the guests Saturday night of the College of Agriculture at a banquet. They will stay Jefferson county Monday, Waukesha Tuesday and then attend the National Dairy show.

A tourist party from Whiteside County, Ill., is expected for a day's tour with the Farm Bureau this week.

The next big tour party to come here will be from the famous Black Hawk Flock of Mississippi on Oct. 10, when will be 200 in the party, coming here enroute home from the National dairy show. A banquet will be given by the bankers on the evening of the 9th and four tours arranged for the 10th.

SALVATION ARMY CANVASS BEGINS

Union Service Held as Preliminary to $6,700 Drive.

"The Salvation Army is absolutely non-sectarian in its work of relief and uplift," declared Earl Jeffrey, divisional program director, at a union service in the First Baptist church Sunday night, held as a preliminary to the opening of the annual drive here Monday. Mrs. George Boyle gave a report of activities and Mrs. Florence S. Hyde talked. The Rev. Robert A. Mac-

Says Whole World Looks to U. S. for Moral Leadership

America is a nation which has taken the lead in moral movements and the world is depending upon it for guidance, according to the Rev. Sam Small, well-known Anti-Saloon league worker, who spoke at Sunday meeting of the International Anti-Saloon nation in order to be the agent in a great man such as prohibition must be a sober nation, he stated, in order to carry it out with success. The success of the movement in United States is being watched, he said. Rev. Mr. Small, a Methodist, and upon his success depends the promotion of the movement in other countries, looking toward world prohibition.

The prohibition agitation was promoted through the churches, and in order to point out the progress with the religious organizations of the various passes, he repeated the utterances of Rev. Dr. Stevens, vice-president of the conference and senator about the abolitionist movement when it ceased to be a political issue and became a religious issue.

The regular meeting service at the First Baptist church, 111 Madison, recently appointed Wisconsin superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League spoke on the work of his organization. The arguments of the "no" element were disputed by Rev. Mac, who said, "The church has the right to decide what it wants. The church that the amendment was passed during the war, when the soldiers were involved in the War, was, he pointed out, that they had at least helped elect the state representatives who had ratified it, and had known their attitude toward it in advance."

The two services were scheduled to speak in Madison Sunday night.

His Yearly Income of Millions Shrinks to Bank Clerk's Salary

New York--In the bank where he is employed as a clerk in the foreign exchange department he is known simply as Mr. Dimitri.

Within the last few days the newspapers of New York have noted considerable concerning Mr. Dimitri, since they have identified his identity. FLOATING ISLANDS FOUND ON OCEANS Masses of vegetation drift away from shores; found mostly in Tropics.

Washington--"Stearns threading the lanes of the alluring Pacific occasionally report the appearance of mysterious floating islands, a phenomenon which has stirred the imagination of man since the ancients wove the romantic story about the chaining down of the floating Island of Delos," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Fritz Rasmussen, Union, Janesville--Mrs. Fritz Rasmussen, 75, died at 9:30 p. m. Friday at her home in Union after a three weeks' illness following a stroke of paralysis. She was born in Denmark and came after her marriage to the Rev. and Mrs. George Boyle, a member of the Danish Lutheran church.

Schieber, Congregational church of Related, Pathéne were Arthur J. Elford, Frank, Eugene, V. Van, Kish, George King and Lee H. Atwood. Burial was made in Oak Hill cemetery.

During July 1892, this island, the last tree of which made it visible for seven miles, was first seen about 50 miles southeast from Nantucket. September it had drifted about 6 degrees farther north and 22 degrees farther east with the Gulf Stream, and it may have eventually landed on the coast of Europe.

Clue of Geography. "Scientists feel the lure of the secrets these drifting islands hold and judge their value over the part they may have played at various times in the history of the earth. Some have these tangled masses of trees upon them, some are covered with dense vegetation, some are islands, studded with and sweet gale grow with the moss, and then cranberries and pitcher plants push their way out on the shelf until the mat becomes about three feet thick. When it has become firm, black spruces and larches begin anchoring it together firmly with the roots."

Frequent in Tropics. "When the water rises the floating mass rises also, but the surrounding shore cannot, and when the wrench is great enough the mat breaks off and floats about. These 'rafts' are often met with in tropical waters, particularly in the Amazon, the Moluccas and the Philippines."

"On the Mississippi and its tributaries these islands are called 'rafts.'

Along the seashore they are often broke off by the action of the waves.

In ponds where the mats have surrounded the edges this vegetation sometimes breaks off and is carried off in rings, ringed island."

"One of the most remarkable of the Mississippi rafts began forming in the Atchafalaya, a lower arm of the river, in 1775. By 1816 it had become 10 miles long, more than 600 feet in width, about 8 feet deep, and had become solid enough to support a growth of trees, some of which are 100 feet in height. Finally the State of Louisiana had to remove the obstruction at great expense, the work occupying four years.

Uncle Sam Removes 'Raft.'

"The United States government has since that time removed a raft which blocked the channel of the Red river for 43 years.

"With mysterious bits of blossom known to the days of Pilgrim wood in the lake of Vandoma which was never seen in the same place for a day and a night together. He also described some islands made of reeds in Lydia which were driven about by the wind and which had pushed about from place to place by waves.

There are thousands of floating islands in Klamath lake, Oregon, upon which the tules grow 12 feet high, but which will seldom bear the weight of a man.

"In Sadawayka lake, Whittingham,

Vt., a large floating island broke off from the west shore, drifted across the lake and was taken to the eastern side of the lake.

"Floating gardens, which are the cultivated variety of floating islands, have been known in various parts of the world from early times, particularly in regions where gardens planted on terra firma would be flooded, such as instance as the floating gardens of Kashiwa land of Northern Japan. The latter supply

Mexico City with practically all its vegetables and flowers.

Abolishing the Constitution.

Time and again in congress the question has arisen in debate as to the constitutionality of a proposed measure; in other words, the question as to whether the measure should become a law, was in accordance with the constitution and within the scope of the limitations laid down in that document or was it a violation of some inhibition or command found therein. That a law might be unconstitutional has been recognized since the beginning of this government. Back of the movement for a law may be great pressure of interests and popular clamor, which are entirely willing to take a chance with the final arbiter and umpire between the people, the states and the nation. In our constitution this umpire is the supreme court.

If there should be a majority in congress which would say that the government should establish and maintain a state religion or should feel that there should be restrictions placed on religious worship, and were able to pass a bill and make a law affecting religion, the whole nation would say, "You cannot do that; it is unconstitutional." But the majority could persist and the law be passed. The supreme court now would decide that such a law is unconstitutional—that the first article in the bill of rights specifically holds against such an act, and under the present method thereof it ends.

We all know it is unconstitutional, but we may have an obdurate congress which has been taught a new doctrine—an imported doctrine. So that congress says that so far as it is concerned the law is all right—a perfectly good law and the supreme court has no business interpreting anything after congress passes a measure. So it passes it again and it becomes a law in fact, regardless of whether it is in contravention of the constitution or not.

It is proposed that congress shall have this power, to pass such laws as it wants regardless of the constitutional limitations and any bill of rights. That proposal is that congress shall have the power to re-enact any law declared invalid by the supreme court and that upon re-enactment that law shall stand. Such a procedure may act as a complete nullification of the constitution.
It in fact, so far as results, are concerned, amounts to abolition. It certainly ends any of the restrictions in reference to amendments thereafter. Congress may enact a law, a violation of the constitutional rights, the court declares it unconstitutional and congress re-pass it without submitting it to the people and the very basic principle is destroyed. The constitution becomes then a mere document without force, it can be changed and re-enacted so that its fathers would never recognize it.

As it is now it requires three-fourths of the states to ratify an amendment. The constitution gives in detail just how this amendment can be made. Others—10 of them—have been made by such action. But under the new proposal we will be able to permit congress to do as it pleases in law making whether constitutional or not and get away with it.

Some earnest professor of socialist tendencies in the Whitewater normal school objects to the use of the term "abolition of the constitution." While it is true that there is nothing so outspoken as "abolition," by the advocates of congressional re-enactment, yet the taking of power from the supreme court and placing it in the hands of a congress stimulated into action by popular clamor and justifying itself in that it represents the passing view of the people, becomes abolition just as far as possible without using the word itself to express the act.

If any one will apply the test to any act it can be easily proved that this is so. It might be well to ask the Whitewater normal school professor what would happen if congress should pass a law providing that no one but a member of some certain church should be eligible to the presidency? The supreme court would read the constitution and say "that is unconstitutional." But congress says this is "usurpation of power by the supreme court. We know what we want. What right has a supreme court to veto acts by elected representatives of the people?" And as there is a majority for the law—a large majority—congress repasses it. At Mr. Compers says, that upon "such re-enactment the law would stand." What is this but abolition of the constitution?

That comes as near being an amendment to the constitution as is possible. It comes as near abolition as can be thought. Yet that is exactly what can happen under the proposal that congress shall have the power to re-enact measures over the decision of the umpire of the people, the supreme court, and destroy the very foundations of the constitution, and the sacred rights of the people be taken away.

In the national popularity contest Coolidge seems to be winner.

THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT

V.—The Senate

By ERICERIC J. HASKIN.

In view of the prestige and political power of its members it might be expected that the senate would be in effect a training school for presidents, and so it was proved in a number of instances.
Ten of the men who have occupied the White House served in the upper branch of congress.
They were Monroe, Johnson, Quincy Adams, Van Buren, Jackson, Johnson, Quincy Adams, Taylor, Harrison and Harding. Garfield had been elected to the senate when he was nominated and elected to the presidency, but he had not taken his seat. Senators have been recognized leaders in national affairs, and have wielded a powerful influence in the political parties with which they affiliated. In almost every national campaign at least one of their number has been an active candidate for presidential honors, and it is perhaps surprising that more of them have not been successful. Warren G. Harding had the distinction of being the only man elected president while he was serving in the senate.

The principle that every senator is entitled to speak as he desires, and that no motion can take away from him the right to the floor until he is ready to yield it, has produced the unique senatorial filibuster. In one of the long discussions Senator Shepherd, of Texas, read a review of the work of the League of Nations, continuing six hours and fifty minutes in the delivery of the speech, and in that time he did not sit down, not himself, nor even take a drink of water.
Years ago, on another occasion, Senator Smoot, of Utah, spoke all night without leaving the desk at which he was speaking.

The senate, as a body, retains its constant nomening things of great historical value. The gavel is probably the most important of all historical relics, being handled daily when congress is in session. The desks at which the senators sit are in many instances those which were used by the senators when the senate met in what is now the supreme court chamber. The desks of Clay, Calhoun, Sumner, Webster, and Jefferson Davis are used by senators of modern times. The desk which Charles Sumner used is known as the Massachusetts desk, and now Senator Lodge, the leader of the republican party in the senate uses it. It is thought by some to be the one at which the great Daniel Webster made his famous speeches in the old senate chamber. The desk used by Senator Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy, is now used by Senator Pat Harrison, also of Mississippi. Senator Hiram Johnson has Warren G. Harding's desk.

Upon each desk in the senate there is a reminder of the older days in the form of a sand-duster, which looks very much like a pepper shaker, and from which prepared sand is dusted upon the freshly written ink to dry it. This was used by the old senators before blotting paper was invented, and the sand-dusters are still kept filled with sand and used frequently.

The senate is a great stickler for its traditions.
In the early days of the republic snuff-taking was popular, and a snuffbox was kept on the desk of the presiding officer. Henry Clay used snuff and would frequently pause in his speeches to inhale it. The old snuffboxes are retained and kept ill even though one uses them now. Senators sometimes carry personal peculiarities into the senate chamber. Sam Houston, of Texas, was a confirmed whittler, and every morning he had a little bundle of pine sticks brought into the senate chamber.

We all know it is unconstitutional, but we may
have an obdurate congress which has been taught
a new doctrine—an imported doctrine. So that congress says that so far as it is concerned the law is all right—a perfectly good law and the supreme court has no business interpreting any-

gardless of whether it is in contravention of the
